Flies That Get Drunk.

"Them ar' flies is old toppers, every one of 'em," said a Dock-street beer-drawer, as he handed over a glass of the foaming beverage to a thirsty reporter—every newspaper office has a thirsty reporter.

"Yes, they are toppers," he spoke up, as he drew the reporter's attention to a swarm of flies that were regaling themselves in a trough from the drippings of a spigot.

"Now, what I tell you is the truth; them ar' flies drink a pint of beer every day, and then they go and sober up. See that netting over those pictures? Well, the flies come down and fill up, then they shut one eye like a drunken fellow going for a lamp-post and start for that netting. Some times they don't make it, and fall to the floor, where they lie until they sober up. You're laughing," put in the bar chemist.

"I am not," replied the reporter, "I am taking it all in."

"Well, they stick their feet in the holes in that mosquito netting, and sort o' tangle their legs around it. You see they feel pretty limber, so 'taint no trouble, and they hang on there until the bulge passes out of their heads. That's so. Do you know, I've got an idea some of those pesky flies go out and bring in their friends? Them flies drink a pint of beer a day; that's over a gallon a week. Now there's pretty near a million flies on that netting—how much does it take to make each one tight? Here's a slate," and the beer-slinger handed over one to the reporter to figure it out.

Just then the clock struck 4, and about 10,000 of the toppers started for the beer trough with a whirl, to take a nip before supper. Some of them drank long and deep, and then lay upon their backs and kicked their legs vigorously.—Philadelphia Record.

A special from Constantinople says the Porte has a despatch from Dervish Pasha reporting the state of affairs in Egypt as very satisfactory.

A disease resembling cholera morbus, but which is designated as cholera by a few ignorant practitioners, has made its appearance in Kobe and Yokohama, sixty cases having been reported in Kobe and two hundred in Yokohama. In the latter port, about one-half have proved fatal, while in Kobe only a very small percentage have died.
